OBITUARY.

Be still prepared for death and death or life shall thereby be the sweeter.
Shakespeare.

Died at his rooms at the Colonial on Sixth street, Port Huron, early Thursday morning, John Murray, editor of the Daily Herald, of angina pectoris. Mr. Murray was nearly 39 years of age having been born May 25, 1868, at St. Marys, Ontario. About twenty-five years ago he came to Port Huron and engaged in the newspaper work. In 1895 he was appointed postmaster in which capacity he served for four years.

Funeral services will be held from the Colonial at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Interment in Lakeside cemetery.

Stewart, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Palmer, who reside at 1035 Howard street in Port Huron, died Sunday morning, May 19. The funeral was held at the house on Monday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Palmer's many Yale friends sympathize with them in their sorrow.

Helen, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Morgan who reside west of Yale, died Tuesday. The funeral was held from the house on Thursday and interment in Elmwood cemetery, Rev. Gill officiating.

BASEBALL SATURDAY.

Two games of baseball were played Saturday out of town, one by our junior team at Avoca, the other by the town team at Memphis. The kids cleaned up on the Avoca bunch, 25 to 2, knocking out two or three pitchers out of the box.

The town team, however, were meekly led to the slaughter to the tune of 7 to 0. A great big goose egg in every inning. Not a Yale man saw second. It seemed as though the Yale team had an off day, sensational muffs being made of easy grounders and flies and balloon ascension throws being the order of the day.

But for two bad innings, a good, interesting game was played. Currier, in the box for Yale, pitched a good game striking out 9 men. Rogge for Memphis copied the same number, but received a great deal better support, and hence won the game. Memphis always bunched their hits at the right time, which thing Yale was unable to do.

ABSORB PERE MARQUETTE RY.

An absorption of the Pere Marquette railway by the New York Central lines and some radical rearrangements as operations that will cut out unprofitable branches and bring the different parts of the system into close working relations with the Michigan Central and Lake Shore is one of the probabilities of the near future, according to opinion in railroad circles in New York.

Tuesday morning dispatches say that the Pere Marquette and Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton combination is in a fair way to be untangled. It is said that George W. Perkins, representing J. P. Morgan & Co., and Frederick H. Prince, representing the Boston crowd who put the combination together, are the negotiators for a settlement with Pere Marquette security holders and have been working three weeks on the details.

The Pere Marquette has been one of the problems before the managing officers of the New York Central system for some time, it is said, with a growing belief that the road would probably have to be taken in and adjusted to the larger system sometime. At one time, it is said, the radical step of a new receivership that would foreclose and reorganize the Pere Marquette was talked of.

As far as the present negotiations are known one proposal is to exchange a better preferred stock, that will be preferred as to assets, for the existing preferred stock, preferred only as to dividends. For this concession preferred shareholders are to subscribe on pro rata basis for $500,000 in collateral trust notes at 5 or 6 per cent to run ten years or longer. The remaining $3,000,000 to meet the road's requirements is to be raised by an issue of an equal amount in car trusts to run ten years. Other questions are to be arbitrated.

M., Thursday, May 30th, and that all of you attend the exercises at Central Hall thereby showing by your presence your appreciation of the services rendered by the old veterans at the time our country was in the throes of war. Respectfully yours,

JAS. E. BEAVIS,

AN INTERESTING TALE

As Told By "A Spectator."

It is not often that our older men take to the sporting life of their youth again after reaching the age of dignity and discretion, but when they do they make a mighty splurge which can be seen and heard a long distance. The case of Dan Ferguson on Tuesday certainly was no exception to the general rule and Dan's plunge into sporting life through the medium of the waters of Mill Creek was plainly heard in The Expressor office. It seems Dan was hunting on the oxbow in a canoe. In some way or other the pesky thing started to wobble and then to rock. With frantic efforts Dan tried to calm its undulating motions, but alas! the canoe was bound to go over.

Kerplunk! Down went the unlucky occupant to the bottom in the soft, unyielding muck. Then up he came spluttering and splashing in a vain effort to get to shore. Dripping and bedraggled he clambered up on the shore to mourn the loss of gun which he had lost in the encounter. We are sorry to say as yet he has not recovered the firearm. We would advise Dan after this to keep out of canoes. They are a dangerous thing unless one has his hair parted in the middle and can wink both eyes at the same time.
